[largest-worker-society-retirement-savings-record] Saving money is not the same as investment. I don't know how the HN community guides it's investments. But my rule of thumb for saving money is that if paying a loan/tax can take all your income you're not investing. If you invest by rebalancing your portfolio you don't have to pay for that. ----- markrages I'm 31. I don't have a job (although I'm freelancing a little). I have about $22k in my personal bank account with no debt or investments. My other bank accounts are in my wife's name with no debt. --- SmellyGeekBoy If you don't have any debts I'd suggest that you convert all that money into a 15yr fixed rate (ABS) investment account (or some slightly higher risk/return one if you feel more comfortable with it). You could also go into bonds or equity to help spread the risk. I have a high degree of interest in equ 82157476af
